

Jacob Clarke is a short game expert with over a decade of experience in the golf industry, specializing in wedge design, club fitting, and performance optimization. As the designer of 18 PING products - including six wedges - he has played a key role in shaping the tools that help players excel around the greens.

Since 2015, Jacob has worked closely with elite professionals on the PGA, LPGA, Korn Ferry, and DP World Tour, helping them fine-tune their short games by tailoring their wedges to course conditions and individual playing styles. His expertise extends to collegiate teams and high-level amateurs, consulting on wedge performance and short-game strategy to maximize scoring opportunities.

Jacob's deep understanding of the short game comes from years of studying the techniques of the world's best players - analyzing how their wedge setups complement their mechanics and shot-making creativity. Today, he coaches LPGA professionals, top collegiate players, and elite amateurs, helping them sharpen their short games through technique, equipment optimization, and strategic insights.

With a keen eye for detail and a passion for wedge performance, Jacob Clarke is a trusted resource for golfers looking to gain an edge around the greens.
